Preparation Tips & Strategy for NABARD ESI Paper

We suggest you start your preparation by dividing your preparation schedule into broadly two categories: Static and Current Affairs.

• Pick a topic from the syllabus
• Read up about it and understand the concept
• Read important current affairs related to that concept including the facts and figures
ESI Static Preparation tips and strategy

If you have studied Economic and Social Issues as part of your graduation, then you don't need to study the basics of Economy or Social Issues. However, if your foundation in Economic and Social Issues is weak, we suggest you start by getting your fundamentals in place by reading about them from NCERT textbooks of 8th to 12th grade. But, make sure you do selective reading of important concepts only.

Learn various Economic concepts for the static part and about social reforms, census, schemes, etc.

Read full names of schemes and not just their abbreviated forms. In the exam, most questions will only contain the abbreviated form. So, it's important that you know the full-forms of the schemes and sub-schemes.

Do not spend too much time on the static part, as most of the questions that appeared in the previous years' Economic and Social Issues [ESI] paper was based on current affairs related to Economic and Social Issues.

NOTE: Having said the above, we suggest you don't entirely base your preparation on previous year ESI paper analysis alone. Use it as a guideline to prepare for this year.

ESI Current affairs Preparation tips and strategy

Most of the questions that appeared in the last year Economic and Social Issues paper were current affairs based which were published in newspapers like The Hindu and magazines like Yojana, and also from the Economic Survey, Union Budget and various government schemes.

We suggest you cover current affairs of 1 year related to Economic and Social issues. It's important that you memorize facts and figures like percentages and other numbers.

The questions are based on the various government Policies in Economic sector, banking and social issues taking place in our surrounding, etc. Follow news related to economics and social issues regularly and read government notices.

Preparation Strategy

- Schemes and sub-schemes on Agricultural & Rural Development are important.
- It’s important that you know the full-forms of schemes, as the questions in the exam will have the abbreviations like PMFBY, PMKSY, PMKKKY, etc.
- Though ARD section of both Phase 1 and 2 include questions based on facts & figures, they’re more in number and more important for the ARD section of Phase 2 exam.
- Static questions are mainly asked in the Agriculture part of ARD and not much in the Rural Development This does not mean that you should completely ignore the static (theoretical) part of the Rural Development syllabus. But rather, don’t spend too much time on theory for Rural Development. While Agriculture topics are specific, Rural Development topics tend to be more generic.
- Focus more on the current affairs part of ARD. The questions are simple & straight forward and based on facts & figures of schemes & programs.
- The questions (both current affairs based, and theory based) were asked from the topics from Phase 2 NABARD Exam syllabus of ARD. Therefore, one must cover the syllabus of Phase 2 for the Phase 1 of the NABARD Exam.
