Q.No: 15 Read the passage and answer the following question:

Women's fashion in India has undergone remarkable transformation over the decades, mirroring changes in society, culture, and global influences. Traditionally, Indian women wore sarees, ghagras, and salwar suits that varied greatly from region to region, reflecting local craftsmanship and cultural identity. Clothing often indicated a woman's marital status, community, and social standing.

In the post-independence era, education, urbanization, and exposure to cinema and international trends reshaped fashion choices. By the 1960s and 70s, urban women started adopting Western attire like skirts and trousers for daily wear, while still preserving traditional outfits for festivals and ceremonies.

Today, women's fashion in India is an eclectic mix of old and new. Fusion wear combining Western cuts with traditional fabrics has become increasingly popular. Designers are reimagining the saree, giving it modern drapes and pairing it with crop tops or jackets. Fashion is now seen as a means of self expression, representing confidence, individuality, and cultural pride in an ever-changing world.

Identify the correct use of a compound adjective from the passage.

Which of the following phrases from the passage is a compound adjective used to modify a noun?

Urban women

Crop tops

Post-independence era

Traditional outfits
